ABSTRACT

Pesantren in the era of globalization face great challenges in maintaining the religious character of students in the midst of the swift flow of modernization. Pondok Pesantren Bahrul Hidayah Sidoarjo as one of the traditional Islamic boarding schools tries to integrate Islamic values with the demands of the times through the POAC management approach (Planning, Organizing, Actuating, Controlling). This study aims to analyze the implementation of POAC management in developing the religious character of students and identifying supporting and inhibiting factors in the implementation process. This research uses a qualitative approach with a case study method. Data were collected through participatory observation for 3 months, in-depth interviews with 12 informants (caregivers, ustadz, and santri), and document analysis. Data were analyzed interactively through data reduction, data presentation, and conclusion verification. The results showed that the implementation of POAC management at Pondok Pesantren Bahrul Hidayah Sidoarjo runs effectively through Planning: Structured program preparation such as tahajud congregation and yellow book studies. Organizing: Clear division of tasks between the fields of education, religion, and independence. Actuating: Implementation of mentoring system and exemplary by ustadz. Controlling: Monthly evaluation through mubasabah and monitoring of santri behavior. This research contributes a model of implementing POAC management contextualized with pesantren culture, as well as offering practical strategies for Islamic educational institutions in facing the challenges of globalization without losing religious identity.

ABSTRAK

Pesantren di era globalisasi menghadapi tantangan besar dalam mempertahankan karakter religius santri di tengah derasnya arus modernisasi. Pondok Pesantren Bahrul Hidayah Sidoarjo sebagai salah satu pesantren tradisional berupaya mengintegrasikan nilai-nilai keislaman dengan tuntutan zaman melalui pendekatan manajemen POAC (Planning, Organizing, Actuating, Controlling). Penelitian ini bertujuan untuk menganalisis implementasi manajemen POAC dalam pengembangan karakter religius santri dan mengidentifikasi faktor pendukung dan penghambat dalam proses penerapannya. Penelitian ini menggunakan pendekatan kualitatif dengan metode studi kasus. Data dikumpulkan melalui observasi partisipatif selama 3 bulan, wawancara mendalam dengan 12 informan (pengasuh, ustadz, dan santri), serta analisis dokumen. Data dianalisis secara interaktif melalui reduksi data, penyajian data, dan verifikasi kesimpulan. Hasil penelitian menunjukkan bahwa penerapan manajemen POAC di Pondok Pesantren Bahrul Hidayah Sidoarjo berjalan efektif melalui Planning: Penyusunan program terstruktur seperti tahajud berjamaah dan kajian kitab kuning. Organizing: Pembagian tugas yang jelas antara bidang pendidikan, keagamaan, dan kemandirian. Actuating: Implementasi sistem mentoring dan keteladanan oleh ustadz. Controlling: Evaluasi bulanan melalui mubasabah dan monitoring perilaku santri. Penelitian ini memberikan kontribusi berupa model penerapan manajemen POAC yang terkontekstualisasi dengan budaya pesantren, sekaligus menawarkan strategi praktis bagi lembaga pendidikan islam dalam menghadapi tantangan globalisasi tanpa kehilangan identitas keagamaan.

INTRODUCTION

The phenomenon of declining character among santri at Pondok Pesantren Bahrul Hidayah Sidoarjo—such as lack of respect for teachers, impolite speech, sleeping in dormitories during study sessions, as well as noncompliance in performing congregational prayers at the mosque and delays in participating in religious activities—has become a serious concern. One of the main issues is the low awareness of santri in obeying the pesantren's rules, especially in the context of worship and religious activities. In addition, the lack of practice and appreciation of pesantren values also hinders the comprehensive implementation of character education.¹

Another issue often encountered in the learning process is the disobedience of santri toward teachers' assignments, disturbance of peers during study, lack of parental support, as well as a low work ethic and learning independence. These factors can negatively affect the santri's academic achievement.² To address this moral decline, a comprehensive effort is needed to build the character of the santri. In the context of relationships with God, fellow humans, as well as law, customs, culture, and religion, character represents the values reflected in everyday human behavior.³ Santri with strong character will live their lives based on Islamic values with high dedication and view the learning process as part of worship.⁴ Therefore, character formation in pesantren must take place in a structured and well-planned manner, guided by religious values.⁵ The aim of this character education process is to develop santri who possess noble character (akhlakul karimah) and a deep understanding of religion according to Islamic values found in the Qur'an and Hadith.⁶

To achieve this goal, Islamic education management plays an important role in designing strategies, implementation, and evaluation in strengthening the religious values of santri.⁷ Islamic education management is not only focused on academic achievement but also on developing individuals who are competitive and possess strong religious integrity.⁸ In this context, the principles of management are crucial to ensure that educational activities run optimally and in a well-directed manner. George R. Terry introduced four main functions of management known as POAC, namely planning, organizing, actuating, and controlling.⁹ By applying POAC principles in the pesantren environment, it is expected that an effective managerial system can be formed to support the success of religious character education for santri.¹⁰

Studies on character education have been widely conducted in the environment of Islamic boarding schools (pondok pesantren). One such study by Kahar, Barus, and Wijaya indicates that the role of pesantren in enhancing the character of santri is more focused on a holistic learning process.¹¹ This is due to the implementation of a dual curriculum that synergistically shapes the character of santri in a well-structured and directed manner. Aynaini's research confirms the success of pesantren in shaping santri character through the integration of basic value education and the internalization of deeper values that serve as the foundation for santri behavior in daily life.¹² Furthermore, research by Lesmana et al. examines the role of pesantren in Islamic education management and its contribution to character formation.¹³ Putri, in her study on children's character education in the digital era, reveals that technology presents both opportunities and challenges in character formation, making it crucial for teachers, parents, and communities to guide children in filtering negative influences from the digital environment.¹⁴ Meanwhile, Yasin studied curriculum management in pesantren and found that this aspect plays a significant role in fostering the independence of santri. Such independence becomes an essential asset for santri when they graduate and return to the wider community.¹⁵

Considering the findings of previous studies that emphasize the importance of pesantren's role in character formation and the need for effective management implementation in character education processes, this research focuses on the actualization of POAC management (Planning, Organizing, Actuating, and Controlling) at Pondok Pesantren Bahrul Hidayah Sidoarjo in shaping the religious character of santri. Yasin's research also emphasizes that well-planned curriculum management can enhance santri independence, while Putri shows that the challenges of the digital era influence character formation patterns within educational settings.

Building upon these findings, the scientific novelty of this research lies in its focus on the comprehensive implementation of POAC management theory in the context of santri character education in the era of globalization—a subject that has not been specifically studied in the context of Pondok Pesantren Bahrul Hidayah Sidoarjo. This research not only analyzes the application of POAC but also offers a contextual managerial approach based on the actual challenges currently faced by pesantren. Thus, this study is expected to contribute both theoretically and practically to improving the effectiveness of Islamic education management in shaping santri who are religious, possess strong character, and are able to adapt positively to the dynamics of the times.

METHOD

This study employs a qualitative approach with a field research method, aiming to gain an in-depth understanding of the implementation of POAC management (Planning, Organizing, Actuating, and Controlling) in shaping the religious character of santri at Pondok Pesantren Bahrul Hidayah Sidoarjo. The qualitative approach is considered appropriate because the collected data is narrative, descriptive, and focused on meaning and process.¹⁶ In the data collection process, the researcher used three main techniques: observation, interviews, and documentation. Observations were conducted directly to observe the activities of the santri, particularly those related to worship and character habituation.¹⁷ In-depth interviews were conducted with key informants such as the head of the pesantren, santri mentors, and the ubudiyah division, to explore their understanding of the planning and implementation of santri character development.¹⁸ Meanwhile, documentation was used to examine the organizational structure, activity schedules, and relevant pesantren regulations.

Informants were selected purposively based on specific criteria, namely those who have authority within the leadership and santri development structure. This aligns with the qualitative method which emphasizes the selection of sources capable of providing relevant and in-depth information. During data collection, the researcher used tools such as a voice recorder, field notes, and a mobile phone camera to document field findings. The collected data were analyzed using the interactive analysis model by Miles and Huberman, which consists of three stages: data reduction, data display, and conclusion drawing/verification.

Data reduction was carried out by filtering important information from interview and observation results. Then, data display was presented in the form of narratives, tables, and diagrams to illustrate the relationship between managerial activities and the formation of santri's religious character. Finally, data verification was conducted continuously throughout the research process to maintain the validity of the findings.

To ensure data validity, triangulation techniques were applied, both source triangulation and technique triangulation. Source triangulation was done by comparing information from the head of the pesantren, mentors, and teachers, while technique triangulation involved comparing data obtained from interviews, observations, and documentation.¹⁹ This step is essential to ensure the validity and reliability of the data and to avoid researcher bias. Thus, this research method not only describes how POAC management is implemented in the pesantren, but also provides a deep insight into the effectiveness of managerial strategies in shaping the religious character of santri in the modern era.

RESULTS AND DISCUSSION

The Actualization of POAC Management at Pondok Pesantren Bahrul Hidayah Sidoarjo

1. Planning

The leadership and head of the school at the pesantren are in the process of designing development strategies for the institution. In an interview, Ust. Ahmad Faris Hadya, S.Pd., who serves as the head of the pesantren, stated:

“The development planning of this pesantren is divided into three program categories: short-term, medium-term, and long-term programs. In striving to achieve these goals, I conduct deliberations and seek input from the school principal and other teachers.”

In addition, the pesantren organizes training programs for teachers. In an interview with the School Principal, Isman Maulana, S.Pd., he said:

“To develop this pesantren, I want to ensure that all teachers have attended seminars and instructional programs organized by the pesantren, whether from the government or private institutions.”

These findings indicate that the planning aspect of the pesantren's management has been carried out in a systematic and structured manner. This aligns with the opinion of Kahar et al., who emphasize that Islamic education management in pesantren must include a directed and sustainable planning process to achieve the goals of character education.²⁰ Research by Lesmana et al. also reinforces the importance of planning in the formation of santri character, particularly through internal deliberations between leadership and educators.²¹ Similarly, Anwar et al. highlight that teacher training is an integral part of pesantren's managerial strategy in improving educational quality and the religious character of santri.²²

Furthermore, according to Goffar, planning in Islam is not merely administrative but also a form of trust (amanah) and moral responsibility in nurturing a spiritually and intellectually superior generation.²³ Likewise, Mudiono asserts that planning in Islamic education must be grounded in shar'i values to provide direction and sustainability within the management system of educational institutions.²⁴ Therefore, the findings of this research have both strong theoretical and empirical foundations, showing that planning is a crucial element in the success of Islamic education management, particularly in the context of shaping the religious character of santri in pesantren.²⁵

2. Organizing

The organizational activities at Pondok Pesantren Bahrul Hidayah Sidoarjo can be observed through the division of main tasks and functions across different fields and programs being implemented. In an interview with Ustadz Andy Fachriandy, the Director of Student Affairs (Pengasuhan), he explained:

"The pesantren leadership categorizes their programs into short-term, medium-term, and long-term programs. The purpose of the short-term program is to organize teaching and learning activities and delegate them to the teachers and the school principal. Meanwhile, the medium-term program aims to conduct training, deepen religious material, and plan semester activities."

This systematic task division reflects that the managerial organizing process at the pesantren is functioning effectively. Each unit is given responsibilities according to its domain, fostering synergy among departments and encouraging collaboration among staff. This aligns with research by Anwar et al., which emphasizes that the success of pesantren in shaping santri character largely depends on a well-structured organization system, particularly in task and responsibility distribution.²⁶

Research by Lesmana et al. also shows that organizing institutional structures is one of the key indicators of success in character education, as effective human resource management can create a conducive learning environment.²⁷ Additionally, Subekti's findings underline that the organizing process in Islamic education must be based on fair division of labor, delegation of authority, and cross-sector coordination.²⁸ Conceptually, Goffar states that in Islam, organizing is not merely aimed at efficiency but is also a form of amanah (trust) in managing institutions professionally and accountably. Effective organizing enables each program to run according to plan and strengthens the character of santri through a well-ordered and controlled environment.²⁹ Therefore, the organizing process implemented at Pondok Pesantren Bahrul Hidayah reflects professional Islamic education management practices, oriented towards strengthening the santri's religious character through a clear and collaborative organizational structure.

3. Actuating

Once the planning has been arranged by the pengasuh and the pesantren administrators, and tasks have been distributed, the next step is to mobilize, manage, and direct those responsible for and executing the programs so that the planned activities can be implemented promptly. In an interview, the Director of Student Affairs, Andy Fachriandy, explained:

"The pesantren leadership asked me to orient the educators and staff to implement the programs that were planned during the pesantren's development. In the short-term program, the leadership continuously encourages us to attract the community to visit our pesantren, while in the medium-term program, they urge me to remain enthusiastic in carrying out pesantren activities, especially in deepening the religious nature of the santri."

This implementation activity shows that the actuating function has been actively carried out, with direct involvement from educators and administrators in executing the designed programs. However, the program's implementation does not come without challenges. Some of the obstacles include the simultaneous execution of deepening religious material and the preparation of lesson plans (RPP) and syllabi, which leads to inefficiencies in time and energy and potentially reduces the quality of the program's implementation. These findings are in line with research by Abdul et al., which shows that one of the main challenges in implementing character education in pesantren is time management and alignment between educational programs and teacher capacity.³⁰ Meanwhile, research by Lestari and Salminawati emphasizes the importance of the role of educational actors in continuously actualizing character values through structured and consistent pesantren activities.³¹

Additionally, research by Alawi et al. highlights the importance of consistency in implementing Islamic value-based character education so that it becomes ingrained in the santri. Irregularities in program execution can hinder the internalization process of character values, which is at the core of pesantren education.³² Furthermore, Ma'arif asserts that implementing effective character education strategies requires continuity and discipline from all parties, especially the caretakers and educators. Therefore, field implementation must continually be strengthened through adaptive and collaborative approaches to ensure the goals of character education in pesantren are optimally achieved.³³ Thus, the implementation of programs at Pondok Pesantren Bahrul Hidayah Sidoarjo has shown positive steps in actualizing the religious values of santri, although improvements in execution management are still needed to make it more coordinated and measurable.

4. Controlling

The supervision function in pesantren management plays a crucial role, as it ensures that the activities planned from the beginning can be executed properly. In an interview with Ustadz Andy Fachriandy, Director of Student Affairs, he stated:

“In short-term programs, the pesantren leadership often asks about how many brochures have been distributed or how the learning process is conducted. However, the supervision carried out is still insufficient.”

This finding indicates that although the supervision process has been implemented, its execution has not been optimal. The absence of a strong control system leads to some pesantren agendas not being properly carried out. As Terry explains, supervision is a vital part of ensuring alignment between planning and implementation.³⁴ Qodir's research also highlights that supervision in Islamic educational institutions is essential for maintaining accountability and ensuring the sustainability of education quality.³⁵ Without adequate control systems, even systematically designed programs will struggle to achieve their intended outcomes. Furthermore, Suriyati et al. assert that the success of total quality management in Islamic education largely depends on effective internal supervision, including regular evaluations and follow-up actions based on field findings.³⁶

Similar findings are noted by Anwar et al., who point out that one of the main challenges in pesantren education management is weak supervision of santri discipline and religious practices. They recommend a more structured approach to supervision to ensure that the internalized values among santri can be objectively measured and evaluated.³⁷ Therefore, even though the supervision component has been implemented at Pondok Pesantren Bahrul Hidayah Sidoarjo, improvements are still needed in reporting systems, evaluation mechanisms, and follow-up actions. By applying a more systematic supervision process based on clear indicators, the effectiveness of POAC management at this pesantren can be significantly enhanced.

Actualization of POAC Management of Bahrul Hidayah Islamic Boarding School Sidoarjo

1. Planning

Designing character education programs based on the goals, vision, and mission of the pondok pesantren is an effective planning management method in shaping the character of santri. An interview with Ustadzah Komariah from the Student Affairs (Pengasuhan) Department revealed:

“The current regulations have been updated, so even if previous rules were ineffective, santri must still be present on time during religious activities. If these activities are violated, they will be evaluated and given additional punishments based on the offense committed.”

This planning is documented in official pondok materials, such as the rulebook for routine worship and religious activities. Each rule includes sanctions aimed at educating santri both mentally and spiritually. Punishment serves as a form of discipline evaluation and an effort to shape a religious character that aligns with Islamic values. These findings align with research by Anwar et al., which shows that Islamic-based character education planning heavily depends on the establishment of structured rules and supervision systems to instill discipline in the pesantren environment.³⁸ Additionally, research by Muhammad Anas Ma'arif highlights the importance of character education strategies through preventive approaches, including the implementation of educational punishments as part of developing students' mental and moral strength.³⁹ In the context of pondok pesantren, thorough planning serves as the foundational step that determines the direction and success of character education programs. This is reinforced by the findings of Lesmana et al., which emphasize that pesantren successfully instill character values through vision-mission-based management, internal regulations, and structured religious activities.⁴⁰

2. Organization

In its efforts to shape santri character, Pondok Pesantren Bahrul Hidayah Sidoarjo organizes tasks and activities based on clearly defined job descriptions within each department and through a well-established organizational structure. In an interview, Ustadz Andy, Director of Student Affairs, stated:

³⁷ Anwar et al., “Manajemen Pendidikan Islam Dalam Peningkatan Kedisiplinan Santri Di Pondok Pesantren Hidayatul Mubtadiin Jati Agung Lampung Selatan.”

³⁸ Anwar et al.

³⁹ Ma'arif, “Analisis Strategi Pendidikan Karakter Melalui Hukuman Preventif.”

⁴⁰ Lesmana, Salsabilah, and Alviana Febrianti, “Peran Pondok Pesantren Dalam Pembentukan Karakter Santri Dalam Manajemen Pendidikan Islam.”

“Every activity we carry out has a management team, which allows us to work together with others to ease the workload, especially in worship and religious activities like congregational prayers. Without structured management, activities would be chaotic and the pondok’s vision and objectives would be hard to achieve.”

The organizational structure involves a systematic division of responsibilities across the departments of pengasuhan (student affairs), education, ubudiyah (worship), and also includes support from santri’s families. Activities such as Qur’an recitation, kitab kuning studies, congregational prayers, and the recitation of sholawat and Rotibul Haddad are managed by specific units, each with designated roles and responsibilities. Monitoring of santri is also extended to involve families during holidays and family visits to the pondok.

These findings are supported by research conducted by Lesmana et al., which states that organizational structuring within pesantren is a key determinant in the success of santri character formation.⁴¹ A well-organized structure and clear division of responsibilities create an environment conducive to the sustainable internalization of religious values. This aligns with the findings of Putriana et al., who emphasize the importance of involving all elements of the pesantren in implementing character programs to achieve effective Islamic education management.⁴² Furthermore, Anwar et al. stress that a clear organizational structure aids in the smooth execution of discipline programs and the habituation of Islamic values within the pesantren environment. Without systematic organizing, an institution’s vision and mission are difficult to achieve and may even result in the failure of character education management.⁴³

3. Actuating

The implementation management at Pondok Pesantren in shaping santri character is carried out through habitual practice integrated into their daily activities. In an interview with Ustadz Sarifudin Zuhri, who is responsible for the ubudiyah (worship) division, he explained:

“Santri are already accustomed to performing their daily routines, such as the five daily prayers in congregation at the mosque, tahajjud, dhuha, reading the Qur’an, performing rawatib sunnah prayers, and fasting on Mondays and Thursdays. Although, at times, some santri still violate the rules due to laziness.”

The integration of religious values into the santri’s everyday life becomes a tool for cultivating positive habits, such as time discipline, responsibility, and spiritual awareness. However, field observations reveal challenges in the form of low motivation and lingering laziness among some santri.

These findings are consistent with those of Kahar et al., who stated that character education in pesantren is implemented through an integration of formal learning and habitual worship practices aimed at building discipline and commitment to Islamic values. This habituation has proven effective in shaping santri character, though it still requires supervision and exemplary behavior from the caretakers.⁴⁴

Additional research by Anwar et al. emphasizes that character-building programs must be systematic and continuous, as the role of teachers' role models and religious routines are central in encouraging the internalization of Islamic values.⁴⁵ Lesmana et al. also highlight that successful character education implementation largely depends on active educator involvement and concrete programs that facilitate the habituation of good behavior.⁴⁶

Thus, the actuating phase of POAC management at Pondok Pesantren Bahrul Hidayah aligns well with Islamic education management principles. However, it still requires intensive mentoring and strengthened motivation for santri, as suggested by previous studies.

4. Controlling

To implement character formation, Pondok Pesantren Bahrul Hidayah Sidoarjo conducts 24-hour supervision and control of the santri, especially regarding worship and religious activities. In an interview with Ustadz Sarifudin Zuhri from the ubudiyah division, he stated:

“Every activity at the pesantren, particularly religious ones, is always monitored by the ubudiyah division, such as prayers, kitab kuning study, halaqah, and other religious programs. We ensure these activities are well-organized.”

This control function aims to guarantee consistent activity implementation, prevent rule violations, and evaluate the performance of both santri and caretakers. Supervision is carried out not only by the pesantren staff but also with the support of parents, especially when santri are at home during holidays or when they visit the pesantren. Parents serve as key partners in the process of shaping their children's religious character.

This finding aligns with the study by Putriana et al., which shows that effective supervision by the pesantren and parental involvement can consistently shape santri into disciplined and religious individuals.⁴⁷ Anwar et al. also state that supervision is a vital element in effective Islamic education management, especially in shaping deeply internalized character values.⁴⁸ Furthermore, a study by Lesmana et al. describes that tiered and consistent monitoring by caretakers, teachers, and pesantren leaders significantly impacts the moral and ethical development of santri, particularly in maintaining their commitment to worship.⁴⁹

In conclusion, the implementation of the controlling function at Pondok Pesantren Bahrul Hidayah Sidoarjo can be considered in accordance with the POAC management principles. However, as highlighted in the interview, there are challenges related to limited human resources for optimal supervision—an issue that should be addressed as part of the system’s ongoing evaluation and improvement.

CONCLUSION

The findings of this study indicate that the implementation of POAC management at Pondok Pesantren Bahrul Hidayah, located in Sidoarjo, plays a highly significant role in the process of shaping the religious character of santri, especially amid the increasingly complex challenges of the globalization era. The management concept, which consists of Planning, Organizing, Actuating, and Controlling, serves as an effective method for running character education programs. Through the field research conducted, we gained in-depth insights into how POAC management is implemented to build santri character. In this process, the role of teachers and ustadzah is crucial, as they strive to instill essential religious, moral, and social values within the santri. Additionally, the application of rules and disciplinary systems is enforced with the aim of enhancing positive behavior among students. This study is expected to provide meaningful contributions to the development of Islamic education in Indonesia, particularly within the pesantren environment, so that it can continue to adapt and evolve in accordance with the demands of the times.
